

Kind of a disorganized mish mash now. There are some broadband options in some places. Others have no coverage. All are still overpriced.

Phone lines should be removed and replaced with fiber and broadband should just be an automatic and free benefit of having a phone.

And while you are at it get rid of cables for TV. There should be no need for more than one fiberoptic line going to each house. It should carry whatever someone wants to subscribe to.

It is costly wasteful and ugly having so many lines going down the streets. And unnecessary. There should be one communications provider with lines to houses, and every vendor should be allowed to connect and compete. People should be able to sign up with them for whatever services they want to be connected to.

TV and Broadband internet should work like long distance phone service, that now shares a local phone service line.
